

THE FUTURE IS SOCIAL

Tuesday 30 April 2024

Brussels

How can we expect people to galvanise around the idea of Europe if they don't perceive that the EU is improving their living standards, opportunities and wellbeing? Progressives have always been at the forefront of innovative policymaking to reduce inequalities, expand rights and improve working conditions. For the current EU legislature, under the leadership of EU Commissioner Schmit, among others, many achievements have been reached, for instance: a directive on minimum wages and collective bargaining, the EU care strategy for childcare and long-term care, the Social Climate Fund, which is still too little but conceptually significant; an EU equality strategy pushing towards equal pay and more women in business; a big fiscal stimulus to protect wages and fight unemployment, such as SURE and the NextGenEU to transform our economy. It is, therefore, undebatable that socialist action has achieved a lot in this legislature. So, how can progressives build on this to show that is the way to go for Europe?

The Belgian presidency of the EU is the occasion in which, finally, social investment and socio-economic matters have been put up as European priorities. In this conference, we will therefore ask how social democracy can revitalise the passion around the European project and showcase that leadership that can pave the way for a future that thrives on inclusivity, sustainability and collective prosperity.

Call to Europe has become a reference point for the progressive family in Europe by providing a platform for exchange for experts, civil society representatives, and policymakers. Under the so-called 3-P-rule, FEPS' call is to have a Positive, Participatory, and Progressive dialogue on Europe's most pressing challenges. Therefore, it aims at 'bridging the gap' between European citizens and institutions with interactive and inclusive formats.

Call to Europe: The Future is Social – taking place in Brussels on the afternoon of 30 April is an occasion to reignite the transformative power of social-democratic values in shaping tomorrow's Europe. A future in which EU policymaking shall put well-being and quality of life first.
