

The Social Transformation of Ukraine: Progressive Insights on Reconstruction and Inclusion

10 December 2024

9:30 - 13:00 CET

FEPS HQ, Avenue des Arts 46, 5th floor, 1000 Brussels

The ongoing Russian aggression against Ukraine has profoundly impacted the European peace and security architecture. Growing securitization of policy-making underscores the need for a progressive answer that must extend beyond the threat of military confrontation to strengthen societal resilience, enabling communities across Europe to withstand the complexities of hybrid threats. As the war continues to unfold on the battlefield, it is essential to consider the long-term implications for Ukraine and broader Europe, prioritizing not only immediate military needs but also thinking about just and sustainable recovery, allowing to return to the foundations of European integration as a successful peace project.

In this context, social democrats have a unique responsibility, drawing on their knowledge and experience, to promote a sustainable peace in wider Europe which faces an increasingly polarized and volatile geopolitical reality. A vision of peace which goes beyond defense capabilities and military expenditure, recognizing the importance of protecting the social fabric of society. With its potential to become a regulatory sandbox for Europe, and as a country at the forefront of change and innovation, Ukraine presents a unique opportunity for Europe to reimagine its future. Through the analytical series "Progressive Ukraine" and a book "Europe and the war in Ukraine: From Russian aggression to a new Eastern policy" (2023) we want to show that social democrats can help Ukraine build a resilient and prosperous society, serving as a beacon for a more just and equitable Europe. Such transformation must prioritize the well-being of all citizens, fostering a proactive state that protects by addressing security needs, balancing social, industrial, and technological progress with equality and sustainability.

The Foundation for European Progressive Studies (FEPS) and its partners, FES (Ukraine), Amicus Europae (Poland), Karl Renner Institut (Austria), Kelevi Sorsa Foundation (Finland), Foundation Max van der Stoel (the Netherlands) and Fondation Jean Jaurès (France) contribute to this discussion, fostering informed dialogue on Ukraine's future in Europe.

10:15 - 10:55 Session I

On a Path to EU membership: Addressing Social Policy Challenges in Ukraine's Reconstruction

This panel will explore the challenges and priorities of social policy, with a particular focus on housing, health, education and the evolving policy perspectives in the context of Ukraine's ongoing war effort and its post-war reconstruction, which should lead to EU membership. We will delve into the impact of the war on housing issues, the needs of internally displaced persons (IDPs), existing welfare gaps, legislative priorities, and broader socio-economic challenges. We touch on the need to invest in human capital, and creating conditions for effective engagement of youth in particular. As the country already embarked on its EU accession journey, our expert panel will offer insights into policy recommendations and actionable plans that should be implemented immediately to ensure a resilient and socially inclusive Ukraine now and in the post-war reconstruction.

Guiding Questions:

- What are the most critical housing challenges Ukrainian populations face, specially those that are displaced, and how can policies effectively address their needs?
- What welfare gaps must be prioritised in the reconstruction process to support vulnerable populations?
- How can legislation be crafted to promote inclusivity and transparency in housing, health, education and wider social policy?
- What role can civil society play in shaping and implementing social policies to ensure a socially cohesive Ukraine in the post-war era?

Speakers:

- Maria Maltschnig, FEPS Vice-President & Director, Karl Renner Institut (online)
- Vita Shnaider, Researcher at NGO New Housing Policy

Moderator: Ania Skrzypek, Director for Research and Training, FEPS

10:55 - 11:10 Coffee break

11:10 - 11:50 Session II

Leaving No One Behind: advancing gender equality and inclusion in the reconstruction of Ukraine

In this panel, we will address the critical issues that must be tackled to ensure a future for Ukraine that is inclusive and leaves no one behind. Our experts will focus on building a more inclusive job market and emphasizing the creation of appealing employment opportunities, including the needs of specific groups whose skills are likely to be in high demand (e.g., as young, highly-skilled individuals), and implementing proactive strategies to better integrate women into the workforce. Additionally, we will explore the development of mechanisms to ensure the meaningful participation of women, youth, and minority groups in Ukraine's reconstruction efforts. Drawing on lessons learned from past post-Soviet transitions, we will identify potential pathways and strategies to effectively address these challenges.

Guiding Questions:

- How can Ukraine ensure that inclusivity remains a priority in its long-term development strategy and guarantee the meaningful participation of women, youth, and minority groups throughout the reconstruction process?
- What policies have been successful in other contexts to create a more inclusive job market, and how can they be adapted to Ukraine's situation?
- What lessons can guide efforts to better integrate women into Ukraine's workforce?
- How can international partners support Ukraine in achieving these inclusive goals?
